A number of additional acceptances of vicpresidencies were announced, and final disposition was made of three matters of Importance which had been referred to sub-committee and reported upon for 6 action of the Executive Committee. The approval of these several subjects in-cident to an aggressive canvass of the country for funds for the creetion of the arch marks the completion of a considerable part of the preparatory work of the Association and the negant beginning of the general work throughout the country nt large.

The Pan-American policemen, who are now guarding the grounds and buildings, will be discharged on November 15, and the regular city police will be required to guard them. It will be possible to detail only a limited number of men for this duty, and it would not be surprising if persons, who feel they have a grievance against the fair because of losses sustained, sought revenge by setting fire to the buildings. It is probable the common council will be asked to provide extra police protection.

Accomplishments of the Oriental Statesman and His Rise to Fame Depicted by the American Diplomnt at One Time His Co-Worker.

the last 100 years."

This is the final estimate placed upor the life of Li Hung Chang by Gen. John W. Foster, ex-Secretary of State and Dislomatic Envoy of China in the settle-ment of the China-Japanese war. The American statesman, apart from previous correspondence in an official way, knew the great Chinaman intimutely during the course of the peace negotiations in be-half of the Celestial Empire, a number of years ago, as well as upon the occasion of the Viceroy's visit to this country in Though a man of education, it was not of high rank by birth. His parents were respectable, but very poor people. His father was a member of what is known as the 'sentry. His mother was a very superior woman, and was recognized as superior woman, and was recognized as such by all who came in contact with her. Her virtues were many, and her fame spread until she was revered by all who heard of her character and gentle influence for good. Secrecy and caution were two characteristics of his whole diplomatic cateer, wid his knowledge of Russia's almost limitless resources made him fear for China if the worst should come. This, I think, will explain his attitude toward that country in recent years."

And in my daily contact with him for several months I learned to appreciate his great menta powers, and to realize more fully the great sway which he exercised over his own countrymen. "There is great hope that the influence of Li Hong Chang may last for a considerable time to come, though nearly all political precedents, of course, are to the contrary. The three most powerful subjects of the Emperor in the last few years have been Li Hung Chang, Vierroy Chang Chih-Tung, at Wutang, on the Yangus-River, and Viceroy Liu Kun-Vih, at Nanking. The man who will probably be called upon to take up als work—the coming man, as you say in this caunty—is Governor Yuan Shih-Kai, of the province of Shantung. He is forty years of age, a progressive advocate, and popular among the people in his province. It is most likely that he will be called upon to take up the great work where Earl Li left it at his death."

The legation officials will probably have Chinese services in memory of the dead statesman, but no date has yet been fixed. The entire legation staff is now in mourning.
